

Queensland Rural Generalist Pathway

First Nations commitment statement

We affirm our dedication to the inclusion and support of First Nations medical students and doctors who wish to train as rural generalists.

We commit to supporting:

- Cultural connection: we acknowledge First Nations profound Connection to Country, Culture and Community, and we pledge to reflect these values within our daily activities.
- Cultural safety: we create and uphold a culturally safe space for each First Nations colleague that is further supported by the First Nations First Strategy and the First Nations Health Equity objectives for medical students and doctors to thrive. Our QRGPs staff will be continuously educated to be both culturally safe and supportive.
- Future medical leaders: we recognise the uniqueness and contributions brought by First Nations people and we are devoted to empowering their journey, through targeted recruitment and engagement, mentorship and dedicated career development channels.

By embracing these commitments, we aspire to contribute significantly to the improvement of healthcare standards in rural communities, to strengthen the connection between medical services and First Nations cultures, and to enhance the representation of First Nations people in the medical workforce.

Our ultimate goal is to ensure every First Nations medical student and doctor feels valued, a sense of belonging, supported, and inspired to excel within the Queensland Rural Generalist Pathway, all within an authentically culturally safe space.
